

2 Sentence Summary

A system that takes mechanical energy generated by a human and produces light energy for the purpose of growing plants. Humans were chosen as the ideal power source because they do not generate emissions, they are feasible on a small scale and they do not require heavy resources to create (like solar panels).