- 1. The function of the building is to house the guardianship program and represent its core values. This includes the physical plant processing and data management that will happen in the lab, as well as the community involvement. This space needs to have a large lab area that can dry, process plants and store the respective data. The space also has to have an area where the community can gather and see their culture being represented throughout the entire building. See the table below for a list of prioritized design criteria based on the team's list of interpreted needs including functional and non-functional requirements, as well as constraints.
- 2. For technical benchmarking see table two where we discuss different ideas for the different spaces in the building.
- 3. See Design Criteria column in the first table for target specifications (numerical values or a range of values which represent reasonable product attributes).
- 4. The client meeting helped narrow down many of the questions about the function of the building. Before the meeting we thought that the plant processing would be on a much larger scale than was actually needed, the client only wanted a small portable table to process plants. The meeting allowed us to understand the values of the guardianship program, and how important cultural representation in the building is. For example, the outdoor space for community gatherings. The meeting gave us specifics on how many offices, computers, and many other criteria for the building.

	https://www.freepik.co m/premium- photo/conference- room-meetings-with- dome-round-shape- with-large- table_4649140.htm	As the client was looking for a circular board room, this is a good idea of how we can design the room itself. Having a ceiling with a nice sky window will add a lot of natural light and brightens up the room.

https://www.labtechsup plyco.com/lab- furniture/custom-lab- benches/	This room is not big enough for ten people, however there are lab benches on the side of the room, a good idea for our workspace. We would upscale the room while designing for our client. We can place the 5-7 computers on these wall benches.

https://worldarchitectur e.org/architecture- news/epvef/vtn- architects-vinata- bamboo-pavilion- creates-a-natural- pathway-in-a-garden- of-highrise- buildings.html	This as well gives a sustainable architecture. Though this structure in the picture is made of bamboo, instead we can use timber as it is used a lot in Algonquin culture. Using this at an entrance can be welcoming for the building users as they see a part of their culture as soon as they enter.
https://dzinetrip.com/str ucture-inspired-by-first- nations-architecture/	The wooded architecture incorporates cultural aspects to the building design as it follows the Algonquin values of being sustainable.
https://brookmcilroy.co m/wp- content/uploads/2020/1 1/BM_Algonquin_Colle ge_Indigenous_Comm ons_1.jpg	We like the outdoor area so we included the image for inspiration. However, we do not like the industrial looking building.
